About the Role: Are you passionate about turning data into meaningful insights that shape ethical culture and learning effectiveness? Join Novartis as an ERC Training & Enablement – Operations & Analytics Specialist and play a key role in delivering analytics, project management, and strategic insights that influence global ethics, risk, and compliance initiatives. Working with senior stakeholders and international teams, you will transform complex data into compelling stories, drive continuous improvement across training programs, and contribute to projects that help strengthen our culture and reimagine medicine for patients worldwide.

About the Role

Key Responsibilities

- Transform complex data into actionable insights that inform training and enablement strategies.
- Measure training effectiveness, identify trends, and recommend continuous improvement opportunities.
- Analyze behavioural and culture-related data to help manage ethical and compliance risks.
- Develop engaging reports, dashboards, and presentations for senior stakeholders.
- Lead and coordinate project activities, milestones, meetings, and webinars across global initiatives.
- Leverage artificial intelligence tools to enhance analysis, content creation, and decision-making.
- Collaborate with cross-functional teams to deliver impactful training and enablement programs.

Essential Requirements

- Bachelor's degree in Psychology, Behavioural Science, Sociology, or a related Social Science discipline.
- Minimum three years of experience in data analytics, information management, and project delivery.
- Experience supporting training and capability building projects
- Strong experience using analytics and business intelligence tools to develop dashboards and insights.
- Advanced Microsoft Excel and PowerPoint skills with the ability to present data through compelling storytelling.
- Solid knowledge of project management methodologies, including Waterfall, Agile, and hybrid delivery models.
- Experience using project management and collaboration tools such as Planner, SharePoint, and Teams.
- Proven ability to build strong partnerships and collaborate effectively across diverse stakeholder groups.
- Excellent verbal and written communication skills, including translating complex insights for non-technical audiences.
