#LI-Remote

This position can be based remotely anywhere in the U.S. (there may be some restrictions based on legal entity). Please note that this role would not provide relocation as a result. The expectation of working hours and travel (domestic and/or international) will be defined by the hiring manager.

The Product Trainer is responsible for designing, developing, and facilitating innovative, interactive instructor-led and eLearning solutions for customer-facing field teams across the designated portfolio. The Product Trainer contributes to business success by collaborating with General Management, Marketing, Market Access, Patient Services, Medical, external vendors, internal training partners, and subject matter experts to develop learning solutions that strengthen disease state and portfolio knowledge, account planning, customer engagement skills, and territory management. This individual designs and implements learning solutions across the full training continuum, from new-hire onboarding to ongoing in-role knowledge and skill development, in partnership with the broader Training team.

About the Role

Major accountabilities:

· Lead and support the design, development, and implementation of product, disease-state, portfolio, and core capability curricula. Ensure learning is structured to support progression from foundational knowledge to advanced application and thought-leader engagement.

· Lead and support content development for continuing education and internal training meetings; partner with Therapeutic Area leadership to identify priorities and incorporate relevant content into presentations, workshops, and learning experiences.

· Identify, adapt, and promote existing internal learning assets that are relevant to the field.

· Conduct ongoing learning needs analyses using internal customer feedback, field interactions, performance insights, and subject matter expert input; use findings to refine the training strategy and curriculum.

· Develop role-specific curricula for diverse customer-facing teams. Build understanding of commercial and cross-functional field roles and strengthen collaboration and orchestration among them.

· Support vendor selection and contract negotiations for learning solutions and manage assigned training budgets and deliverables.

Lead and facilitate training programs across the product portfolio and partner with stakeholders to execute high-quality learning experiences.

Essential Requirements

Education: BA/BS Required

· 2-5 years of pharmaceutical experience (preferred) – Experience could be across any combination of the following:

Sales representative

Sales training experience

Marketing

· Strong diverse product, disease-state and portfolio knowledge, with the agility to learn and support multiple disease areas, therapies, priorities, and customer needs.

· Presentation, facilitation and platform skills, including ability to communicate in small and large settings.

· Artificial Intelligence (AI) Fluency.

· Strong Communication (oral/ written) & interpersonal skills.

·Understanding of portfolio strategy, business priorities, and associated tactics.

· Ability to partner effectively across functions, including commercial, medical, market access, patient services, capabilities, and external vendors.

· Administrative management skills: planning, organization, operational decision making and analysis.

· Demonstrated experience in working with others to achieve organizational objectives including the ability to anticipate and adapt, own and/ or work group tactics to support changing business needs.

Preferred Experience

Diverse marketplace, customer, and competitive landscape knowledge of Neuro-Immunology
