Location: Barcelona, Spain

You will play a pivotal role in safeguarding and strengthening Novartis' Technical Operations by providing independent, strategic assurance across manufacturing and supply. As Director, Internal Audit, TechOps, you will lead complex, high-impact audit and advisory engagements that shape how risks are identified, mitigated, and managed across end-to-end operations. Partnering closely with senior and executive stakeholders, you will bring deep operational insight, sound judgment, and a forward-looking mindset to influence better outcomes, advance audit innovation, and help ensure we continue to deliver quality medicines to patients worldwide.

About the Role

Key responsibilities:

- Oversee and provide overall direction for complex, risk-based audit and advisory engagements across manufacturing and supply operations
- Ensure audit scopes address end-to-end Technical Operations risks, including quality, compliance, technology, and third-party models
- Support audit planning and audit program development by identifying key Manufacturing & Supply risks and acting as a technical reference to ensure audit coverage remains risk-based, relevant, and aligned to business priorities
- Review audit findings and reports to ensure technical accuracy, clarity, and evidence-based conclusions
- Drive pragmatic, value-adding recommendations that strengthen controls and enable measurable operational improvement
- Act as a trusted advisor to senior leaders, maintaining independence while fostering constructive, credible partnerships
- Provide direct line management to Senior Managers, setting clear strategic direction, overseeing performance and development, and ensuring consistent, high-quality delivery of risk-focused audit and advisory engagements across Technical Operations
- Coach and develop auditors through hands-on guidance, feedback, and knowledge-sharing in Manufacturing and Supply
- Advance digital, data-driven, and artificial intelligence-enabled audit practices in collaboration with enablement teams

Please be advised that this role has a global travel requirement circa25%.

Essential Requirements:

- Degree in technical or scientific discipline related to manufacturing, supply chain, logistics, or production planning
- Substantial experience within internal audit functions in highly regulated industries, preferably pharmaceuticals, biotechnology, or medical devices
- Strong practical knowledge of end-to-end processes in manufacturing operations, supply chain management, quality systems, and external manufacturing models
- Proven experience leading audit and advisory engagements, managing senior stakeholders, and delivering high-impact outcomes
- Solid understanding of pharmaceutical regulations and standards, including Good Manufacturing Practice (GMP), Good Distribution Practice (GDP), and global health authority requirements such as FDA, EMA, and other international regulatory bodies
- Demonstrated ability to operate in complex environments, influence senior leaders, and communicate audit conclusions with confidence and tact
- Strong people management experience, with a track record of leading, developing, and motivating high-performing teams.
- Fluency in English (written and verbal) is required; additional languages are an advantage

Desirable Requirements:

- Professional internal audit or supply chain certification, such as Certified Internal Auditor or Certified Supply Chain Professional
- Experience applying data analytics or artificial intelligence-enabled tools within internal audit or regulated operating environments
